Some of these instructions may be “no-brainers”, but lets face it, welding is a dirty job. For the best possible care and longevity of your Coogear Welding Helmet Bag, please take a minute to read the following :

WELDING HELMET BAG CARE INSTRUCTIONS

Washing and Drying Instructions:

WARNING!!!! If you have a “laundry phobia”, please pass this info along to your spouse or mom

- Machine or hand wash, warm water, on the gentle/delicate cycle with laundry detergent.
- Air dry only, DO NOT PUT IT THE DRYER, smooth by hand when wet to smooth out the wrinkles
- Warm, steam iron if needed

These careful washing and drying instructions are because of the layer of foam sandwiched in the bottom of the bag. High dryer heat and the action of a regular wash cycle or tumble dryer may damage and/or dislodge the foam padding sandwiched in the bottom of the bag. Take my word for it, I learned it the hard way.

Helpful Tips:

- Build-up of grime and grit on the drawstring will cause it to wear out faster.
- Dirt and debris that fall down inside the bag can potentially scratch your lenses, so make a habit of turning the bag upside down and shaking it out each time before putting your helmet inside. The bag is specially designed for the helmet to lay face down and will stay sitting upright when the drawstring is tightened.
- Keep the pocket flaps secured to keep your stuff in and dirt out.
- Move the bag away from the direct area where you or others are welding.
- The cleaner the bag is kept, the longer it will provide you with service.

Fire Retardant Information:

Coogear Welding Helmet Bags are treated with a Fire Retardant mixture to help protect your bag from stray sparks, open flame and hot metal. After each washing, I recommend that you re-apply a fire retardant spray which you can buy at a fabric store or online. Follow the manufacturer’s instructions.

*I take great time and care to assure that the detail and quality of every bag is perfect, therefore, your satisfaction with this product is very, very, very important to me.
